

Not His-story, Not Her-story But Another-story

Crooked Arrow has created many books from multiple life's experiences that have important messages brought about by her love and concern for Mother Earth and all of life on the planet.

Throughout history, Native American and other indigenous cultures have always used stories as a means of teaching their people and these stories have been passed on from one generation to another. These stories are still being told today. Through her stories, Crooked Arrow is trying to point us all in the right direction and enlighten us on how we must become medicine and rainbow warriors so we can together heal Mother Earth and save all her inhabitants.

The story starts when Grandmother Rainbow sits with all the rainbow children from nations around the world. These are the children of the rainbow warriors who also learned through Grandmother Rainbow to love Mother Earth by telling them stories as children. Through her teachings these rainbow and medicine warriors fearlessly started to bring the truth and make the changes necessary in order to bring about the healing of the planet.

Grandmother Rainbow tells the children the whole story of Creation, the first Man and the first woman, what we call Adam and Eve and how they fell from grace through their disobedience to the Great Spirit, Our Creator. The dark ones deceived them. They were very jealous of their relationship with the Great Spirit. Fallen from grace man and woman, lost their paradise, destroyed by the negative vibrations that were created through their own actions.

You will read another version of history never before told until now by Grand-Mother Rainbow and how mankind through out history has created all the negative vibrations that have caused mother earth to be unbalanced and sick.

This is a great story to be told to our children and grandchildren so we can all bring about the changes and change the vibrations to one of love and harmony and bring about the balance once again to mother earth.
